The 1974 PINE NEEDLES began with

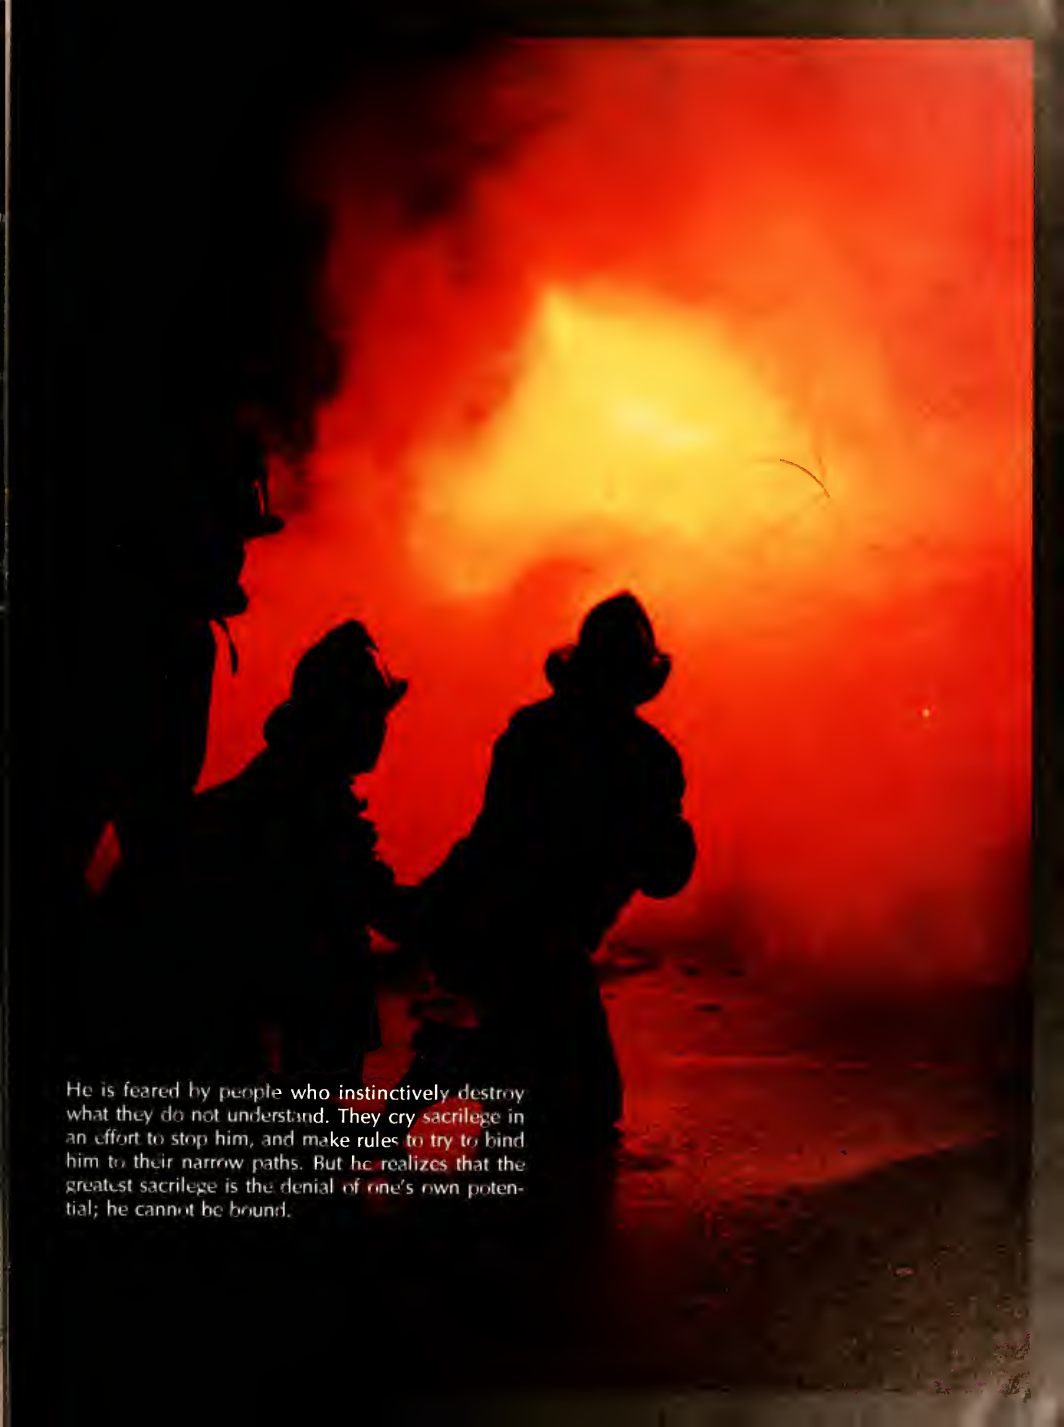

ONE

for that is how all things must begin.

Behind every idea is one. One person who acts as the igniting flame — creating the first fire, the first wheel, the first starship. It is the individual who works only for the satisfaction of realizing his own potential, driven by force of ego. He is the flame that cannot go out.

A dramatic photograph showing the silhouettes of three firefighters in the foreground, looking towards a massive, intense fire that fills the background with bright orange and yellow light. The firefighters are wearing helmets and gear, their forms dark against the glowing backdrop. The fire is large and turbulent, with a bright yellow core and a surrounding orange glow. The overall mood is one of bravery and the scale of the fire.

He is feared by people who instinctively destroy what they do not understand. They cry sacrilege in an effort to stop him, and make rules to try to bind him to their narrow paths. But he realizes that the greatest sacrilege is the denial of one's own potential; he cannot be bound.

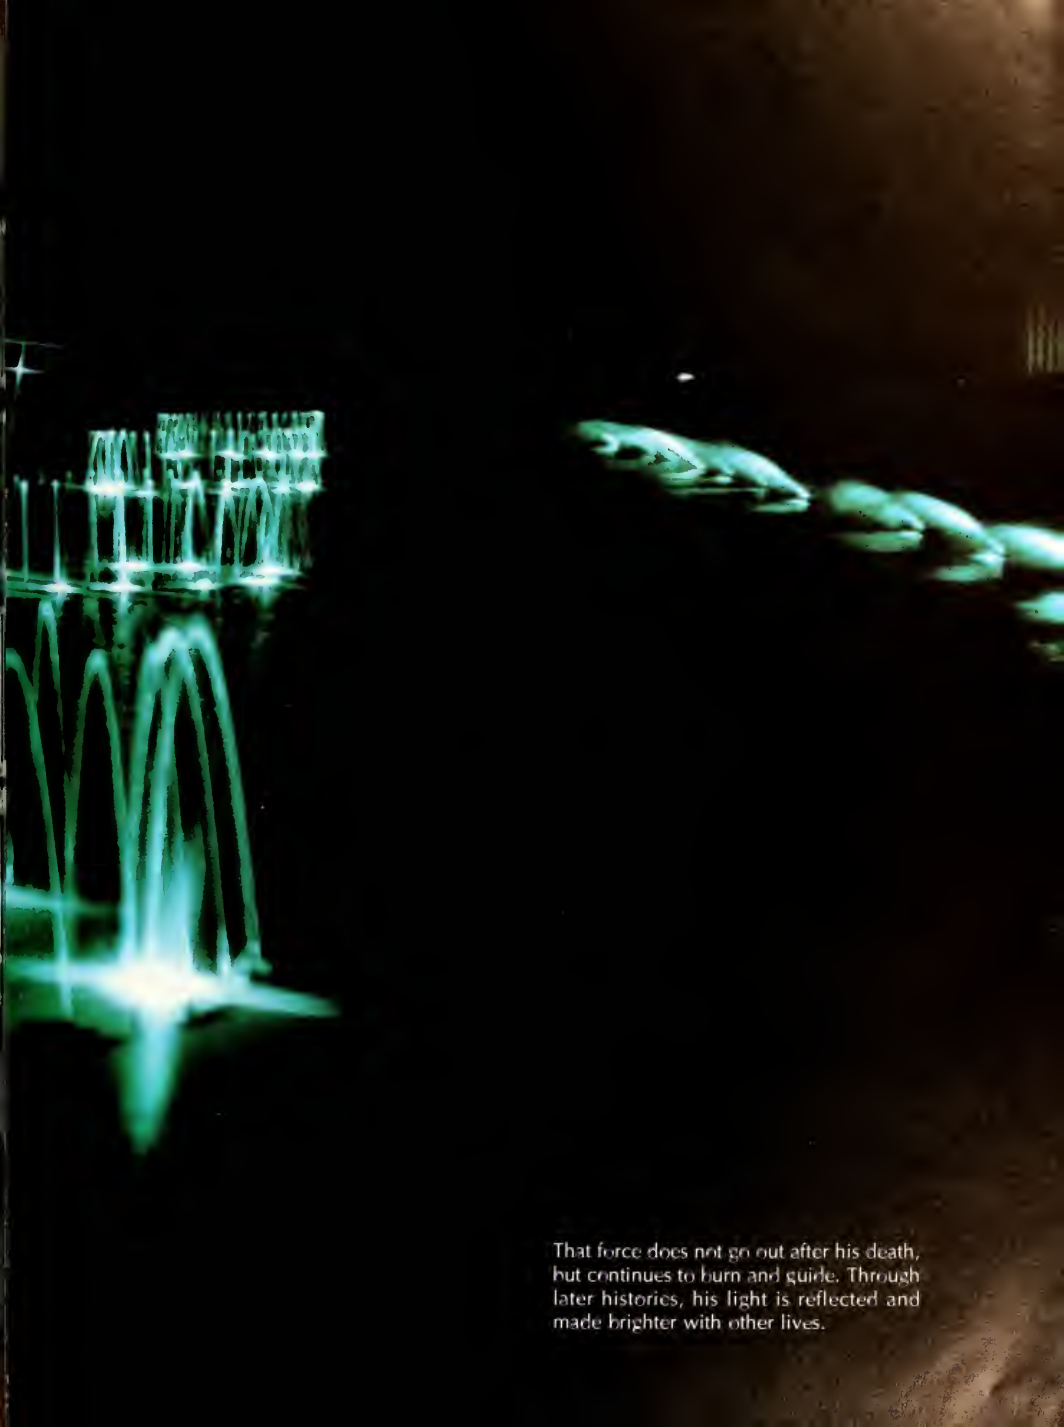

Resentful, they use him nonetheless, for without his creativity the world would be dark.

The flame attracts others like him, who believe first in themselves. And like the fire that forges steel, the force of his being shapes the lives of others.

That force does not go out after his death, but continues to burn and guide. Through later histories, his light is reflected and made brighter with other lives.

The life of the individual is a constant reminder of courage against those who fear their own existence. Fearing, they may try to destroy him, to safely return to their own dark paths. But like the human spirit, he can never be completely extinguished; he will take spark and burn once more, against all who hold the faceless masses superior.

He is the fire that will not go out.

Fall

The campus is busy tonight; there are organizational meetings in Elliott Hall. The cynicism of later in the year has not yet set in, and people are still willing to be cajoled into joining one of the many activities. They are returning from dinner now, stomachs trying to adjust to ARA and its myriad delicacies. The leaves are still green on the trees, but it is the tired green of late summer when hot weather seems badly inappropriate. People are playing frisbee in the Quad prior to settling down to study. Later tonight there will be a water fight and the freshman girls will allow the guys from Hinshaw to massacre them. The battle lines will change several times before weary housemothers call a halt.

There is still an air of newness, of excitement, it can be called that. Especially is this true for the freshmen, but it also spills into those jaded upperclassmen who count the semesters remaining. It's the feeling of a fresh start, and underlining it is the first premonition of cold weather.

SGA: A rough year for representative democracy

This year began when Hinshaw dorm seceded from the Student Government Association, led by its dorm coordinator Jim McAbee. The student senate became the focal point for the SGA as the year's debate covered such topics as salaries for SGA and organizational officials, By-laws and Constitutional changes, and election policy. There was the usual jockeying for position among some of the senators, and there was an aborted attempt to abolish the student literary magazine. Some students were heard to wonder aloud just what did go on in the senate; for the most part, SGA affects the lives of few students, and so is usually ignored.

Unless, of course, you're involved in it.

Several awards were presented by the outgoing president of senate at the end of the year. Among these were the awards for Outstanding Senator, which went to Suzanne Jennings, Cathy Krinick, and Ben Sells (above left). A new award in the form of Outstanding New Senator was presented to Chuck Melvin, Don Moore (above right), Kevin Moore, and Roslyn Wells. The awards were followed by the annual throwing into the fish pond of the senior senators by the remainder of the senate.

How're you getting home?

Know anybody going to Chapel Hill this weekend?

Winter

It now requires several minutes to get out of classes and the cafeteria. Winter has necessitated the wearing of heavy coats, scarves, etc., and it takes time to grapple into these. Few people go out after dinner. It is too cold to do anything but stay inside and study or watch TV. The dorms are nothing but lights — they sparkle through bare trees and the whole campus seems more open.

Walking back from night classes or staring out the window, there is a wish for snow so strong it is almost physical. But snow is rare. Popcorn and the Wednesday Night Movie will have to suffice, along with a (possibly salacious) recounting of last weekend's trip to Chapel Hill or wherever. In the back of each mind are the coming finals; there is an almost desperate search for some activity to erase the thought, anything to keep from contemplating impending doom.

Christmas will be here soon, and the looked-for break. The advantage of finishing exams before going home is balanced against the effort of Christmas shopping while cramming.

The air is sharp with winter cold, and it definitely smells like snow. Maybe tomorrow.

The Oresteia and other activities

A part of the American College Theater Festival, UNC-G's production of the Oresteia was presented at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington this spring. The group, directed by Dr. Herman Middleton, won the honor on the basis of regional performances, with special recognition not only for acting but also for its unusual use of the Bronze Age as the setting for the play.

In other action, the Men's Tennis team won first place in the Dixie Intercollegiate Athletic Conference; two groups from the Romance Language and Russian Departments won high honors for foreign play competition; and the Debate Team again won an impressive number of victories. This year's team of 23 students won over 72 awards, including four first place awards at major competitions. They also won first place in the State Championship Forensics Tournament, ending the year with an average of five awards per competition.

Backstage (and onstage) with the Theater for Young People

"It's more than a kick, and we're sure not getting rich."
"We do it because we love it."

It's Saturday afternoon between performances of "Aesop's Fables", the rock version of Aesop's Fables and the current production of the Theatre for Young People. The cast is talking about the special problems of playing to children's audiences.

"Basically it's the difference between a child's brain and an adult brain. Kids are much harder — they'll tell you if they don't like you." — Danil Torppe.

"The plays are much more physical; they have to be acted in a broad, slapstick manner. You can tell from the opening number what kind of audience you have, and that changes the character of the play. You have to pick up on that character change and play to it." — Bobby Bodford.

"The adjustments are incredible. Each time it's something different, something that must be adapted. You develop a reliance on training and character. You learn a whole set of sounds and expressions different from adult theatre." — Laurie Conway.

"They'll argue with you, respond to your performance. If you're the villain — it's painful. There's no hate like a child's hate." — Bobby Bodford.

"This show in particular is a very high energy show, lots of singing and dancing and movement. We had to rewrite the music and some of the script to this play, to adapt it for these audiences. The actors do everything — costume, etc. — sometimes three times a day. And each time you open there's the same fear — 'I'm gonna blow it this time.'" — Jan Powell.

Upstairs in the theatre, what seemed like a million noisy kids were running between rows of seats, making normal passage impossible; pulling off raincoats while mothers retrieved umbrellas. The lights go down and with much squealing, the children race for their seats. Parents stand up for frantic headcounts. By the time the lights are down, the kids are clapping in and out of time to the overture and bouncing in their seats, anticipating.

"In order to understand your own world, you have to be able to view it from another world. This is part of a million-year-old ritual." — Craig Spradley.

55 and 68: the energy crisis hits home

Amid gas lines and lowered thermostats, the energy crisis changed lifestyles — at least temporarily. While buttoning the extra sweater worn to class to compensate for the 68 degree temperature, students could be heard trying to arrange carpools; rides home became infrequent and one trip often had to do for two, whether it was home or to the store. Spring changed that — for the time being, old habits were resumed.

Bureaucracy

On February 20, 1974, the Pine Needles received the following statement:

FROM James H. Allen

In accordance with the Affirmative Action Plan for the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, effective immediately, all University publications, including student publications, must contain the following statement:

"Admission to, employment by, and promotion in the University of North Carolina and all of its constituent institutions shall be on the basis of merit, and there shall be no discrimination on the basis of race, color, creed, religion, sex, or national origin."

This statement must be printed in each edition of our student publications. I shall appreciate your assistance in ensuring that our publications comply with this directive. If you have any questions concerning this matter, please let me know.

Now, our first reaction was an amused wonder at this brand of freedom of the press. Then we realized that, being only a student publication, we are evidently subject to control by the government, whether student or national. If HEW decides that we can't be unprejudiced without this statement, who are we to question our betters?

And then we realized the true purpose of printing this statement, and suddenly we felt better. Isn't it wonderful how a single paragraph — authorized by some HEW bureaucrat down the street from the Capitol, 300 miles away — can end centuries of prejudice and abuse? Now why didn't we think of that sooner?

Spring

The evening is calm and quiet on campus. The air is warm, and scattered students are walking to their Thursday night classes. Others are in the dorms, finishing what they can of the week's work, so they can pack and be ready to leave tomorrow or party this weekend.

The trees along College Ave. have been in bloom a few weeks now, and are almost at an end. The return of color to a brick and gray campus has brought spring fever with it; the tennis courts are always crowded and classes are cut in favor of laying out in the sun. Seniors watch the mails for grad school notices or job offers, others look for summer employment, and all over campus there are showers for brides-to-be.

A solitary student cuts across the grass to Graham Building, eating an ice cream cone. He is wearing a tank top, and on top of his books there is a frisbee. Yesterday it rained; with today's clear weather, the cycle began again.

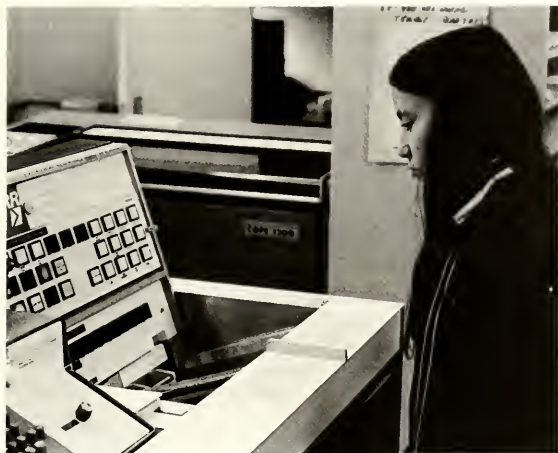

Sounds on campus or, things you can't get in a yearbook, Part I.

A harmonica in the halls of McIver — the dull silence of lines in the bookstore — Russian in front of a classroom building — coke trucks rattling away from the dorms — trash falling down dorm chutes — noisy conversation in the Robot Room — the rustling undercurrent of a dull lecture — maids flushing the dorm toilets at the same time — the hourly electrical buzz throughout the campus — the electricity of a good discussion — the echo of balls bouncing in the gym — apprehensive chatter in the town students' lounges and the cafeteria just before an exam — bells that ring at the wrong time on Tuesdays and Thursdays — the dead quiet of the campus at 7:00am when student nurses and teachers are leaving for work — the blare of the all-page system in the dorms — the laughter and yelling of small children in the nursery school — the silence of a classroom building during an exam period — the sound of pledges screaming their undying devotion to APO — the NBS Gospel Choir rehearsing — the crack of a gavel calling for attention — the hum of machines and people on Cary production nights — the expectant clamor of the crowd awaiting the first group of streakers — the excited murmur of a rumor spreading . . .

Senate screws self to wall — again

In the belief that some matters are best handled satirically, we are reprinting the following article from the April 1 issue of the Carolinian.

by Janelle Lavelle

In a surprise move Thursday night, Senator Ben Smells forced a bill through a sleepy Senate at 3:00 a.m. The bill abolished all organizations located in the Publications Wing of Hellion Hall and turned their old allocated space into dressing rooms and holding areas for Christians and the Lions, the two new UNC-G intramural football teams.

"I thought they were calling for Potty Vote," said Nancy Frostdon, referring to the traditional five-minute bathroom recesses. Other senators, nodding off during speeches by Smells and sermons by Father Kevin More, seemed to have been similarly deluded.

Smell's debate centered around the extensive use of bathroom doors as news media. "If people wanted to read a newspaper, they'd be ripping off Carys instead of toilet paper," he pointed out.

Senator Jinks Jacoby maintained that self-expression on bathroom doors was not covered by freedom of the press, since bathrooms were definitely a required-meeting area. Therefore, if Elections Board ever mislaid another election, the candidates could not advertise or publicly platform there.

Father More supported Smells, saying that simply because the students wanted campus-wide votes on everything from Town Crier Editor to Pinball-Machine Auditor, there was no reason on earth to give them enough information to make a logical decision.

And since the Cary is the last bastion of thought at all, logical or otherwise, "the only good Cary is a dead Cary," More ended.

Budget watchdog Cliff Witchell pointed out the extensive cost of Kitty Litter for the Lions' areas. Smells replied that he felt the money used for salaries was quite appropriate for expenditures of this type. "We could employ defeated SGA vice-presidential candidates as keepers," he added.

Senator Catty Crinyuck, upon being awakened after the vote, moved for reconsideration of Smell's bill. This was approved, and opening the new debate she pointed out that none of her constituency had read anything but Mad Magazines for the past two years, and thus found newspapers, literary magazines, and yearbooks a waste of good student money which could better be spent on jewelry co-ops, Snoopy posters, and free social-disease tests for the men's dorms.

When Senator Flesh Jennings pointed out that Ms. Crinyuck was really supporting Smell's bill, Ms. Crinyuck thanked her with a vawn and unconsidered her reconsideration of the consideration, and everyone was right back where they started from.

In other miscarriages, Baron Davis' citizenship was revoked, her property was confiscated in the name of the People, and her Spiro Agnew t-shirt was hung in effigy on Charles McIver. She was warned that a sterner reprimand would follow if she ever dared call Senator Smells a "little tink" again.

Under appointments, Senate President Cheryl Sozick flipped a coin and chose Mickey Braylock as incompetent-in-residence, and then called a ten-minute recess to figure out exactly which Braylock Mickey was.

Four new committees were set up: the Ad Hoc Committee on Witch Huntings and Cross-burnings; the Ad Infinitum Committee on Violation by Coke Bottle Investigation; the Ad Nauseum Committee on Exorcism as an Economical Snow-Removal Method, to be chaired by Father More and manned by all hardy souls who hadn't lost their dinner at the last Senate meeting; and the Ad Minimum Committee on Brain-Wave Testing for Elections Board members — "So we can be sure they each have a whole one," said the committee's chairing, Ms. Crinyuck.

Under President Sozick's announcements, the Committee on Legislation's shotguns to ward off Senator Smells were reported on order, the Judicial Reform Committee had one opening due to a certain member's being caught in an unnatural act with two cows and a tube of Ben-Gay, Thursday was moved to Tuesday, and Monday was abolished altogether to allow Sunday's committee extra time to meet.

Homesick for those old activist days? Long for a good old-fashioned romp with the campus police? Want to get out in the fresh air after a night of studying?

Here it is! 1974's answer to the anti-war demonstrations!

STREAK!

Strangers in the night, or
What's a nice girl like you . . .

Overheard at a streaking:

"Cathy! What on earth are you doing here?"

"Well, I notice you're out here looking pretty hard yourself, Helen, so don't act so smug to me!"

Records set:

Most number of girls at a streaking

Greatest number of miles streaked on a motorcycle by a couple.

Largest number of members of one organization (Type II) to streak together (this was awarded to WUAG-FM).

Who was that masked man?

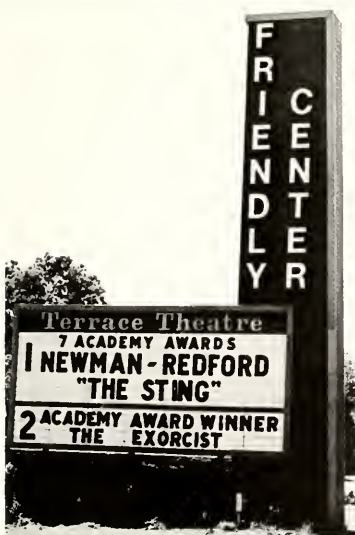

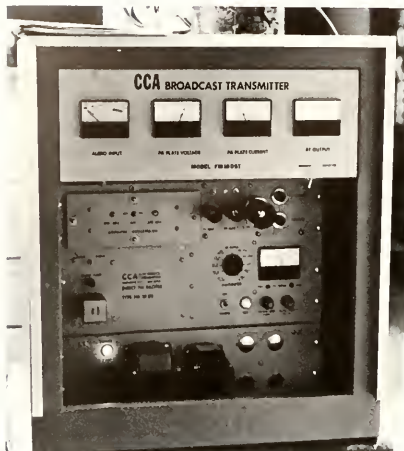

Greensboro surrounds the campus. From The Corner to High Point Road to Friendly Center, to the homes and apartments of town students, the city is influenced by and influences the university.

At Random —

WUAG-FM received a new transmitter.

Mark McDaniel (above) and Roxie Hobson were two UNC-G students who ran unsuccessfully for State House in the Democratic primary.

In an effort to alleviate wear and tear on Charlie APO established The Rawk, upon which random groups could espouse their particular causes.

In its first full year of activity Gamma Sigma Sigma continued to provide service to the university community.

Yum Yum's, the beloved ice cream store, left its residence of over 50 years to move to a new location across the street. The block it formerly occupied will be the site of the new Administration Building.

Police survey the scene at Grogan Dorm, where a bullet shot through a window followed a bomb scare of one week earlier.

Several classroom buildings were altered to better accommodate handicapped students.

In Memoriam

June P. Galloway, an Assistant Professor of Physical Education, died March 13, 1974 after a brief illness. Dr. Galloway's life was one of service to her profession. She served her students, colleagues, and friends with dedication, enthusiasm, and integrity.

To those she taught remains a song of professionalism tempered with personal warmth . . .
of high ideals both in thought and action . . .
of total commitment to the preparation of teachers-to-be.
To those with whom she taught remains a song of dedication to a common cause . . .
of a positive state of mind giving strength to others through personal example . . .
of unrestrained concern and affection for those whose lives were so closely entwined with her own.
To those with whom she shared a profession remains a song of willing service in helping to keep the torch burning . . .
of sincere interest in those who shared her life's work . . .
of everlasting devotion to a cause she so deeply loved.

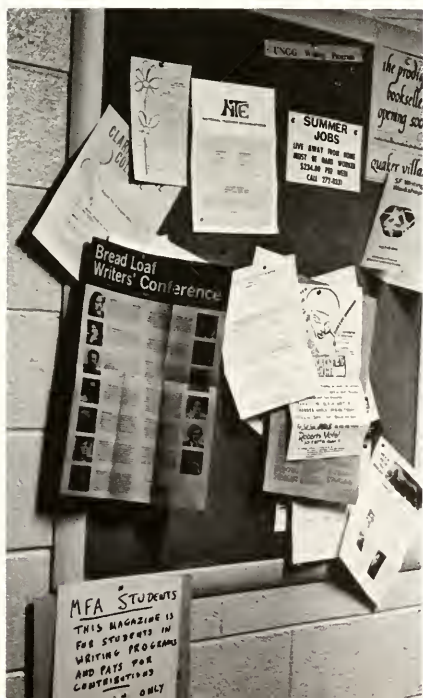

Oh, yes I am wise,
But it's wisdom born of pain.
Yes, I paid the price,
But look how much I gained.
If I have to, I can do anyth:
I am strong, I am invincible
I am HUMAN.

But doesn't she have that certain aura of lost Atlantis about her? A classical wench, all things considered.

Editorially speaking: A crisis will arise to fill every vacuum. Media Board

There is a maxim — something akin to Murphy's Law or Parkinson's Law — which says that a crisis will arise to fill every vacuum. Each year it seems that something or someone becomes the target of pursuit for student government. Last year it was the Neo-Black Society; this year it was the campus media.

In an attempt to cope with the resulting problems, Media Board was created. With the old Publications Board defunct for roughly two years, the media heads began meeting on an ad hoc basis in the fall along with several faculty and administrative personnel. After spending the fall semester in research, the group evolved a constitution which was approved by the Chancellor, and Media Board became a Student-Faculty Committee.

The problems were not long in coming. While still in ad hoc status, the student senate had given to the MB the problem of settling the outstanding bill for the 1973 Pine Needles, plus some related problems which occupied the remainder of the semester. Not the least of these was the difficulty in persuading the student senate and others that the media were capable of disciplining themselves. Another hindrance was the fact that several of the senate felt that they were losing power to the loosely-structured group; one senator was heard to proclaim, when the MB constitution was formally presented to the body, "Are we bound by any of this garbage?"

Then there was the time in the spring when the student senate attempted to remove in mid-year the salaries which the media personnel had held since September. Tempers flared in a senate meeting which ran until 5:00am, and while individual media heads completed plans for a strike, MB was called upon to assume its role of mediator until the matter was resolved.

The crisis may attack elsewhere next year, but Media Board will be actively defining its role and assuming more responsibility. This year's co-chairmen were Cliff Lowery and Karen Davis; next year the chair will be held by Kelley Griffith and Janelle Lavelle.

North Carolina Student Legislature

North Carolina Student Legislature meets in Raleigh each spring to pass legislation sponsored by its member schools. It is a mock General Assembly with each school sending House and Senate delegates and alternates as well as observers. NCSL is the oldest body of its kind in the nation and has been training the state's legislators for over 35 years.

This year's bill topics ranged from penal reform to the environment. UNC-G's bills on bike paths and the state Fine Arts Council both passed with few amendments.

Cathy Krinick was this year's delegation chairman, and Cheryl Sosnik held a state office in her role as Convention Chairman. The delegation is open through interview to all undergraduate students and regularly includes some not usually involved in student government.

Student Government — Legislative

What can be said about a legislative body which begins the year with a solemn oath of office and ends with a mad scramble by the underclassmen to throw the outgoing senior senators into the fish pond?

The student senate is probably the most divisive closely-knit group of people on campus. It can be fairly said that they are unified only when under attack from an outside force. With meetings every week, they are probably the most consistently active branch of government, although many may complain that their domain does not extend to every phase of student life.

Many have accused the senate of being little more than a series of stepping stones for political careers; some use it for this. It remains the representative body of the students and as such provides training in some forms of representative democracy. It is one of the most direct routes by which the student may change the campus.

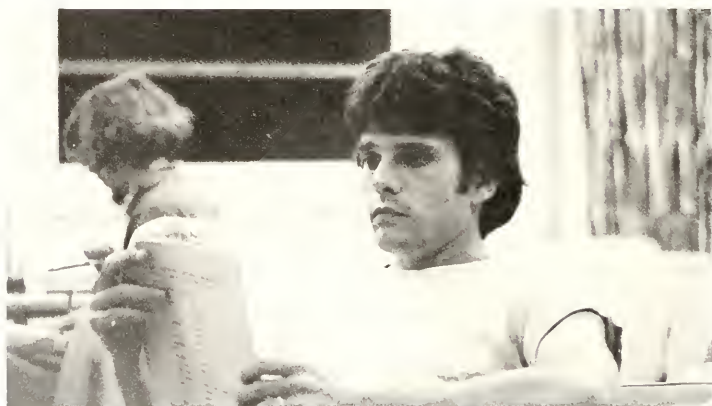

This year's senate was chaired by SGA Vice-President Cheryl Sosnik in her capacity as President of the Senate. Suzanne Jennings served as president pro tem.

Any number can play: a look at the Student Government elections, 1974

Each spring in a flurry of midnight conferences, poster paint, and wheeling and dealing, the junior politicos of UNC-G set out to prove once more that politics is the simplest of native games.

This year was slightly different. The campaigns started as usual, with candidates and their workers babysitting the choice spots for posters until the midnight deadline was reached and campaigning could begin. After that, little was the same.

For one thing, one of the candidates for SGA President just happened to be the Dorm Coordinator of Hinshaw, the men's dorm which seceded from Student Government the previous fall. After a year of militant non-involvement with SGA, Jim McAbee not only ran for president; he won.

McAbee's opponents, Kevin Moore and Carleen Sims, conceded the election when the results were announced. This is worth mentioning because several of the other offices — from Vice-President to Chief Marshal — were appealed by the losers.

What ensued was a series of maneuvers unlike anything seen since the Keystone Kops met their demise. The co-chairmen of the Elections Board, Jenny Jacoby and Lou Wilkerson, were faced with a bewildering assortment of appeals, topped only by the fact that SGA had no coherent Appeals Procedure and no one could give them any straight answers. This meant that the appellants had to re-file their appeals because grounds for appeals were not established until after the first flurry of appeals had been filed. The chairmen were slightly hampered since they were filling a vacancy created by the resignation of the original Elections Board chairman just a month prior to the elections, which was followed by a steady reshuffling of the committee members.

As the campus looked on, first with concern and later with bored disgust, the Senate attempted to rectify the confusion but was handicapped by the factions for each candidate still sitting in the body. After roughly two months, the last of the appeals was heard (Elections Board having first clarified what the "official" results were, a procedure which took somewhat over one week), with the final tally being that all races stood as they were before the appeals, and the last of the new officers was finally sworn in.

His truth goes marching on.

Don't like it? Appeal it!
and appeal it . . .
and appeal it . . .
and appeal it . . .

Jenny Jacoby and Jeff Miller, candidate for Attorney General, who appealed his election four different times to Elections Board and, losing his case, took his opponent to Honor Court. He lost there also.

Wanda Metzger and candidate for Attorney General Cherie Flynn, who was finally sworn into office just before final exams.

Roslyn Wells, former Attorney General Judy Arnn, and Dr. Jean Gordon of the History Department, who was called in to testify about Cherie Flynn.

Another appeal?

Elliott Hall Council is composed of dorm and town student representatives who, under the leadership of the chairmen and officers, provide a large portion of the organized entertainment on campus. This included a coffeehouse which operated every other weekend, bridal fashion shows, at least three dances each semester, and concerts by several artists including Anne Murray, Sha Na Na, Harry Chapin, and Cornelius Brothers and Sister Rose. Many of the council members also work in the day-to-day maintenance of Elliott Hall, which serves as the meeting center for the campus as well as the town students' home-away-from-home.

Lifestyles

College is more than just classes - it's a way of life.

Students react to this life in several ways — enthusiastically joining every available activity or disgustedly avoiding all contacts with humanity. The majority of students fall somewhere in the middle of this spectrum, and at one time or another probably experience both extremes.

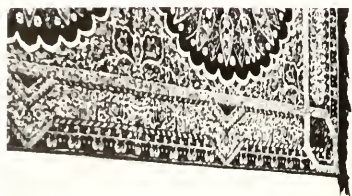

The only clear line of demarcation is that between dorm residents and town students — and the battle analogy is not entirely out of place. It's not so much friction between dormies and townies — it's just that the two ways of life are so different. Living on campus means there is no escape — even after you've left the library or cafeteria or classroom buildings, how far away can you get? If you live in town, however, and can find a ride home, or have a car, or can hitch a ride or ride a bike — or hoof it — then you might get away from the campus pressures.

It probably balances out. In the dorm, someone else takes care of the electricity and the heating bills, but you share a bathroom with 15-25 others (hopefully of the same sex). If you're lucky enough to find a good apartment, where the trash is removed somewhat regularly and you're close enough to walk to school when the car breaks down again or your bike disappears, then you are afforded the luxury of avoiding house meetings and not having to sign your guests in at the desk. In this case, you may also become a sort of haven for your beleaguered dorm student friends. . .

The tendency in a women's dorm is to become close to the girls on the hall. It's hard to avoid this when you're living in each other's laps, as it were. You get used to what your mother would refer to as "all kinds", and you go through Halloween and Christmas parties together, especially in the freshmen dorms. The enthusiasm may wane when you move into the upperclass halls but you get used to making your own entertainment. The threat — or sometimes outright presence — of monotony never quite goes away.

Dorm life could also be viewed as an exercise in primitive interior decorating.

Men's dorms are a shade different from women's — or, as one woman put it, "those guys get away with murder". Admittedly, there is a certain peculiar quality to life in Hinshaw or Guilford or Phillips, and it goes further than the fact that the visitation policy is almost completely ignored in a men's dorm. For instance, life in Guilford at 3:00am is about as lively as it was at 9:00pm. Maybe more so.

"We had gone out for beer and when we got back, Paul was really out of it, so his girl friend kinda pours him into the front door of the dorm and we waited for him to find his way up to his room. Only took him five minutes — what held him up was the fact that he went through all of his keys trying to find the room key. When he finally gets in, he falls asleep on the floor. Which is cluttering up the room. So we took him down and put him on a sofa in the parlor, and then moved the whole thing in front of Underdog's (the counselor) door, knocked, and ran. I don't know when he finally came to, but I suspect it was shortly thereafter."

The men at UNC-G are still a minority, and subject to commensurate heckling. This may change, however — next year the men take over still another former women's dorm when they move into Bailey, and more are escaping what dorm regulations yet exist by moving off campus, so there is an increase in the number of town student men. We've come a long way in ten years.

"The best thing about dorm life is that it convinces you that apartment life is where it's at."

(former Guilford resident)

College life includes many types of learning — coping with ARA Slater is only one. Cafeteria eating is known for developing a cast-iron stomach and a sense of humor — or an ability to concentrate, while eating, on anything other than the matter at hand.

There are diversions to be found, especially when you're desperate. When an evening in the library isn't enough to break the cycle of dorm-classroom-cafeteria-dorm, tensions may result in a 4:00am trip to Your House, Dunkin' Donuts, or any of the other oases of light and activity in nighttime Greensboro.

Another option is extracurricular organizations (see page 132); a few choose this. Or the more structured entertainment: coffeehouses, UCLS events, TSA luncheons, dorm parties. Often it's a matter of popcorn and TV in the room, or a fast trip to Bill's or somebody else's apartment for a beer. Anything to relieve the boredom.

And then there are times when you just have to get outside . . .

Town students may receive the most practical training of all — they learn to commute. They also learn to cope with that Tscheep Productions, Inc., answer to a $16 parking fee: The Mud Lot.

Mabel — Come Home!

Attitudes are formed here which are not easily renounced, the more so because the formation is often insidiously subtle. Mother was right — you do meet all kinds, and even in your inaction you have made a decision regarding the choice they offer. Hopefully you have moved a little closer to an understanding — not just an awareness and tolerance of other people's choices, but a clearer conception of that choice which you must make for yourself.

It may be that, of all the things you learn at college, the most important are lifestyles.

Founder's Day 1973

It was the biggest birthday party on campus. With the cooperation of SGA, ARA Slater, Alumni Associates, UCLS, and many others, UNC-G celebrated Founder's Day on October 11th. The dimensions of the 2-layer cake were Gargantuan: 48 ft. by 2 ft., 900 lbs. total weight (300 of that was icing), and 700 rosebuds. A large turnout of students, faculty, and staff devoured over one ton of fried chicken, in addition to other food, and there were free prizes for everyone, tricycle races, hula hoop contests, and a Dixieland jazz band. The celebration ended with an impressive fireworks display, followed by the 1973 Founder's Day speaker in Aycock Auditorium — Winston Churchill III.

The scene — birthday cake is on the right.

"... and I was talking to some girls just before the service, and they said, "Reverend Presley, give us some hope!" But I have no hope to give you, for you see, you are the hope..."

Rev. Thomas Presley

Moravian Love Feast

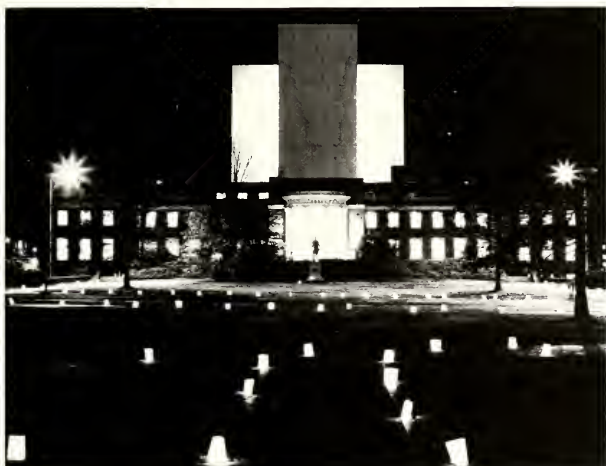

The annual Moravian Love Feast was expanded to three nights this year, indicative of its massive success. The service has steadily increased in attendance each year and now includes large numbers of Greensboro residents as well as students.

It's probably one of the most popular events on campus, and deceptively simple: just Christmas carols, beeswax candles carefully wrapped in red crepe paper by the Interfaith Council, some buns and specially-made coffee served by volunteers from APO, and a brief address by Rev. Thomas Presley of King Moravian Church. It always ends with the singing of the traditional Moravian Carol, and then "Joy to the World", during which lit candles are distributed and raised. The tradition on campus is that your wish is granted if the candles can be carried to the dorm without going out — so the service really doesn't end until later, when candles are hopefully blown out in dorm lobbies — if you're lucky.

"What are all those paper bags doing on the sidewalk?"

Luminaires are another Christmas tradition on campus. White paper bags are filled with sand, into which votive candles are sunk, and are distributed around campus (usually by Elliott Hall Council, APO, and any volunteers who show up for the bonfire and hot chocolate). At a specified time that night, the candles are lit — by anyone who can grab a pack of matches — and for a few minutes at least, there is time to think about something other than the impending finals.

Looking Around

All year long, Elliott Hall and various other organizations sponsor activities which can make life a good deal more pleasant. This year the activities ranged from coffeehouses — at the new Nightowl! — to holiday coffees to concerts, dances, and almost spontaneous events. Town Students' Association sponsored Kite Day (kites and cokes supplied) and regular Tuesday morning coffees for town students, as well as frequent town student luncheons.

There were religious events, open to everyone for free or a small fee. A Succoth booth was erected on the library lawn in the fall; the annual Christmas lovefeast was again a success; in the spring there were Passover meals and sunrise Easter services.

Elliott Hall was often the scene of departmental and school coffees, seminars, and lectures. In addition, it is the regular meeting place for the majority of campus organizations, and the ubiquitous Third Floor Elliott houses the Type II student organizations offices, including the publications and the radio station.

And above all else, if someone came up with an idea — regardless of how crazy — he could probably find someone in Elliott Hall to help him carry it out. In almost every sense of the word, Elliott Hall is the student center — and some of the pictures that follow give a brief idea of the scope of its activities, as well as activities elsewhere on campus.

Alumni Associates

Alumni Associates was founded three years ago in an attempt to involve the Alumni Association more directly in the lives of the undergraduates. The group is composed of alumni and undergrads, who together have sponsored and co-sponsored many events such as May Day 1973 and 74, Founder's Day, special nights in the cafeteria, Goodness Day (pictured here), and a campus-wide hunt for ice cream tickets hidden in the trees. For many, Alumni Associates are those people who hand out balloons and lollipops for no special reason — but when you've fallen in a rut from routine, a balloon can be quite therapeutic.

Nightowl

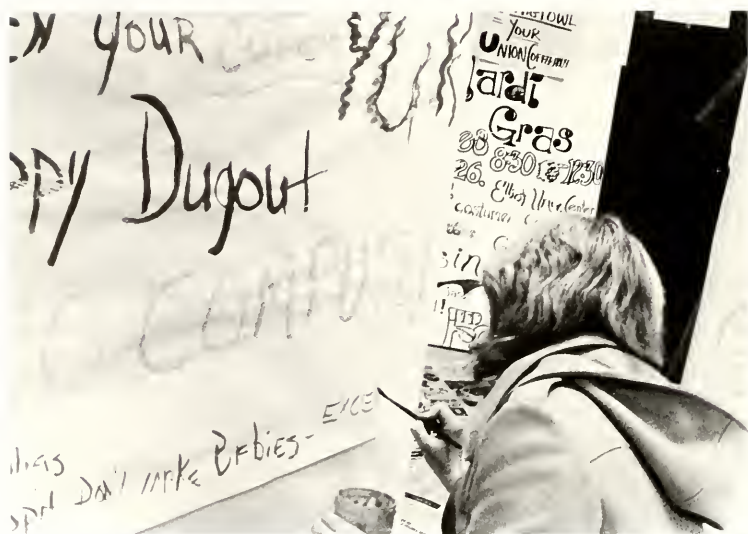

Open every other week, the Nightowl coffeehouse features a variety of campus talent — and some from off-campus (auditions are held periodically and are open to everyone). For the small price of a quarter, it's a chance to retreat to candlelight for a few hours.

Student Activities Awards Banquet

The first annual Student Activities Awards Banquet was held on April 15. Attended by over 300 organization officers and members, faculty, and staff, the evening began with a champagne reception on the Elliott Hall patio. Following dinner was the keynote speaker, C. Shaw Smith, College Union Director of Davidson College, who spoke on the purpose of student activities in college life. The new SGA officers were sworn in, along with the recently-elected organizational officers, and several awards were presented to the outgoing members. The evening concluded with a one-act play, a slide presentation, and the giving of the (also first annual) Academy Awards to deserving (?) students.

Outstanding Seniors

Each year the senior class elects twenty of its own to the title of Outstanding Senior. This year, those elected were asked to respond to the following questions:

If you were writing your autobiography, what would you title it and why?

What do you consider your most important contribution to the University?

What are your most important activities while at the university?

Each Senior was asked to answer these questions in his own words. The answers are reprinted here with as little editing as possible

Cheryl Sosnik. Autobiography: The Unsinkable — because no one can get me down. Contribution: my work in Student Government; it's been my life. Activities: President of the Senate; Convention Committee Chairman for North Carolina Student Legislature; Freshman Dorm Coordinator; Parliamentarian for the Senate.

Steve Shytte. Autobiography: The Unknown Soldier. Most of the things that I am involved in are not noticeable to the student body: for example, my work with APO and the Town Students' Assoc. I think that personal glory is not important, though. As long as the final results of the work that I put into something are noticeable, then the work has not been in vain. As long as someone has been helped or served in some way, then it doesn't matter who did the helping or the serving. Contribution: established the Dr. Rice Memorial Town Students Scholarship. Activities: APO; Town Students' President; Student Senate; Orientation Committee.

Fran Garrison. Autobiography: The Joy of Life. The following poem, by an anonymous author, does a better job of explaining my feelings than I could: The joy of life is living it and doing things of worth. In making bright and fruitful all the barren spots of earth.

In facing odds and mastering them and rising from defeat,

And making true what once was false, and what was bitter, sweet.

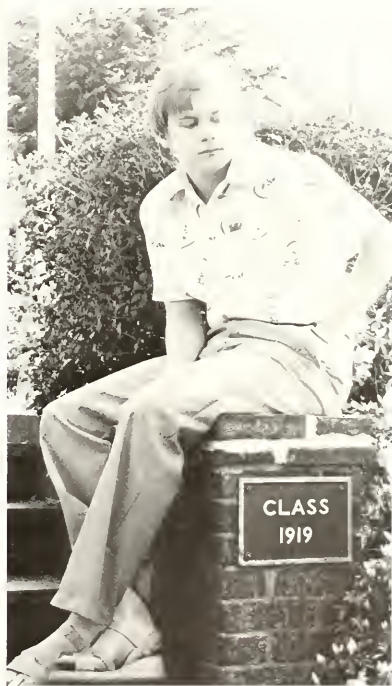

For only he knows perfect joy whose little bit of soil

Is richer ground than what it was when he began to toil.

Contribution: I see my greatest success in the strengthening of the EUC Council and its organization and attitude.

Julie Spivey. Autobiography: Rainbow — a nickname from the Psych department that stuck. I feel like my life is a rainbow of many beautiful experiences. Contribution: Nursing. I feel that in my major, I have had a unique chance to represent UNC-G in our community, which I view as an integral aspect of relating university life to the "real world". Activities: Senator; ass't. Dorm Coordinator; Dean's Advisory Council, School of Nursing; Student Excellence Award.

Terry Taylor. Autobiography: Guaranteed to Shock Yo' Mama. I entitled it that because my life is so dull that I will need a come-on title to sell it. Contribution: I tried to bring to this campus a little bit of evidence that says there are people on this campus that can write and create works of art; we are not a school that turns out mere artistic cretins — we turn out damn good ones.

Fran Myers.

Roslyn Wells. Autobiography: Girl With Something Extra. I hope that through the past few years I have given a bit extra or more than was necessary. Sometimes you wonder if it is even worth it to care, but someone has to. I care, I get mad, I work and I pray to God I accomplish something. Maybe all of us should be given the recognition of having "something extra" because we are fools enough to care. We are all special. Activities: Senator; Secretary of Golden Chain.

Leon Chestnut. Autobiography: Survival. These were the times that tried our souls. Contribution: Leadership, patience. Activities: Neo-Black Society Coordinator; Golden Chain.

John Schoffstall. Autobiography: Grist for the Mill. James Branch Cabell's archetypal author, John Charteris, says of his work (in Beyond Life), "I am afraid that all is grist for that omnivorous mill." Very true. Before everything else, I am a writer. My life is grist — grist for the mill. And so are yours, kids. Contribution: Insuring that every sentence that goes by me — as copy editor of the Cary — has at least one verb in it. Activities: Writing for Coraddi; copy editing for the Cary; wet-nursing the publications IBM.

Dean Squires. Autobiography: Trucking Right Along. I guess I have a high need for new experience. I don't think I jump from one thing to another without finishing the job at hand, but I like to hurry and get on with it. Contribution: I think my most important contribution to UNC-G is not an office I've filled but my defense of what I believe in. Activities: North Carolina Student Legislature; Senator; SGA Secretary.

Lynn Nesbitt. Autobiography: Gone With the Wind, because I am ever floating from place to place, seeking only happiness for others. Contribution: To the students of UNC-G, especially the criminals, my abundance of fairness, honesty, and integrity. Activities: Court Member, Assistant F.D.C., Executive Secretary of Court.

Mary Frances Sink. Autobiography: The Plants in My Life: A Botanical History of Mary Frances Sink. Having been an avid "plant freak" for several years, I have discovered that across time the health and wellbeing of my personal collection of botanical specimens is an accurate barometer of change in my life. Contribution: Any senior deserving of the title "Outstanding Senior" made their most important contribution to UNC-G when they resisted that initial drive toward the inertia which pervades this campus and took up their first in a series of thankless jobs that keep the machinery of campus life running.

Janet Hall. Autobiography: Camelot. The reason I have served here and elsewhere actively in the organizations is because I believe that activism can be used to society's good as well as to its detriment. Contribution: speaking up in class — all my professors knew there was at least one person awake. Activities: Course and Teacher Coordinator; Academic Internships; Secretary for Community Affairs; Assistant D.C. and O.A.; Golden Chain.

Tru Blue. Autobiography: The Agony and the Ecstasy, just because that's the way it's been — especially these past four years. Contribution: Student Orientation Committee, changes in the program from short period activity to year 'round activities. Activities: Student Orientation Committee, Chairman; University Orientation Committee Student Chairman; Freshman Dorm Coordinator; Alumni/University Council.

Gary Jarrett. Autobiography: Proving Myself. When I came here as a freshman, I saw an evaluation of me. It wasn't overly encouraging. From that time I've worked to prove to this university that they had me pegged wrong. Contribution: My willingness to take an active part in University affairs, and taking the time to care what goes on at UNC-G. Too many students at this school are too apathetic. Activities: Active member of Alpha Phi Omega; Chairman of the Senior Steering Committee; Member of Phi Alpha Theta History Fraternity; Town Student Senator.

L. Jane Weston. Autobiography: The Alarm Clock. I never can seem to hear my alarm clock in the morning . . . I guess my "Circadian Rhythm" is out of tune! Contribution: I just try to help. Activities: Business Manager of S.G.A.; North Carolina Student Legislature; VITA Volunteer; Orientation Assistant; Golden Chain.

Carole Anne Brooks. Autobiography: Neutrality is My Name. I try to stay impartial to many situations so I can have a clear head about all sides of the issue before choosing a stand, if one is taken at all. Contribution: In my past year as editor of the Carolinian, I have brought the paper from the small paper of past years to a full size newspaper, averaging six pages twice a week. I have tried to make this a student newspaper, and not just a sounding block for a few irate people. More attention was paid to activities on campus than in the past.

Britt Blaylock. Autobiography: Strange Visions, Odd Hours. Contributions: Showing some people that the "correct" way is normally neither the easiest, most efficient, nor most productive method. Activities: A.P.O.; Concerts Committee Chairman; Senate.

Laurie L. Conway. Autobiography: A Divine Comedy of Errors. I suppose everyone can find their life to be somewhat a divine comedy of errors, but I feel I have certainly had my share. Contribution: Perhaps my greatest contribution to UNC-G was being a part of the Theater for Young People touring company. While we were on the road we were ambassadors of this university and our dramatic program. It was one of my most valuable learning experiences with respect to theater and people. Activities: Dean's List and Honors Program; Spencer Love Scholarship in Drama; W. Raymond Taylor Scholarship in Theater.

Chris Jones. Autobiography: Dear Mispronounced Academaniac. Contribution: As far as my great accomplishments for this year, I feel that I have no accomplishments to claim for myself. It was the students and the administration that made the great strides forward. I feel my greatest privilege was the opportunity to work for them and to be a part of the new positive spirit on our campus.

Suzanne Jennings. Autobiography: Survival of the Fittest. Strength of character, mind and temper are major requirements for successfully finishing four years at UNC-G. Some of us quit, some endure, others prevail; occasionally some choose the five or six year plan. Here the issue becomes for me not who was president or vice-president, outstanding senior or valedictorian, but how I can best use my experiences to prevail in the future, in the real world. Activities: Three years in the Senate; President pro tem of the Senate; Vice-President of T.S.A.

John J. Berry, Jr. Autobiography: A Man for All Seasons, because I know how to dress for the weather. Contribution: Helping to dispel the rumor that all guys living in Phillips Dorm are homosexuals. I'd like to think I did the job all by myself, but . . . Activities: Student Radio; Senate; Honor Court Defense Counsel; Secretary of Student Services; Chairman of Internal Senate Committee to Investigate Senatorial Absences.

Donald Moore. Autobiography: It's My Story and I'll Tell It the Way I Want To. Contribution: Functions of Alpha Phi Omega, because the entire university benefits from the service. Activities: A.P.O.; Senate; Elections Board.

Karen Davis. Autobiography: No Easy Answers. For the issues in which I've been involved all my life, I have found that there are no easy answers. A clear view of all sides of an issue often makes the decision more difficult than a myopic viewpoint would have allowed. Contribution: a tie between my work as one of the founders of the Media Board and the author of its constitution, and my willingness to speak up for the President and the conservative philosophy (the last two items not being necessarily related). Activities: Editor of Pine Needles; Appeals Committee Chairman 2 years; Student Chairman, Media Board; elected President pro tem in 4th year as senator (later resigned to edit yearbook).

Endings

We end much the way we began . . .

... with empty classrooms; a parent who swears you'll never fit all that stuff into one car ("Where in the world did you put it in that little room? You should have told me you had this much; I'd have brought a U-Haul-It . . ."); the readjustment to another lifestyle. Changes aren't easily seen; longer hair, shorter hair, a suntan may be the only visible differences between September and May. But during the goodbyes to the people you've lived with for almost a year, you begin to understand.

In the spirit of the season and all end-of-the-year awards, we are reprinting
THE FIRST NOT-TO-BE-ANNUAL CAROLINIAN KUDOS OF THE YEAR
by permission of the authors, Janelle Lavelle and John Schoffstall.

The "From Flophouse to Fame" Award to Jim McAbee, who after leading the Hinshaw secession from SGA last fall, ran successfully for SGA President this spring. (Gee, Mommy, I could swear there's somebody on the Elliott Hall Patio waving behind an American flag . . .)

The "Let 'Em Eat Cake" Award to the student senate for telling all the other organizations to tighten their belts and then raising their own refreshment budget.

The "Hey, Genr'l Custuh, Ah Think Ah Sees an Injun on That Horizzen" Award to Flash Jennings for suggesting in September that it might be a good idea to prepare an Appeals policy, in case we ever needed it.

The "Gertrude Stein 'A Rose is a Rose is a . . ." Award to the people who have the nerve to name something that starts in January a Spring Term.

The "Spiro, The Key To Your Office Door Doesn't Seem To Fit Any More" Award to Cheryl Sosnik and the Switchboard, who almost had Third Floor Elliott walking the streets office-less after 11:00 pm.

The "Top Monkey Is the One Swinging from the Highest Tree" Award to the English Department, which has been dispensing with faculty faster than it has been finding Ph.D. candidates to fill their places.

The "Finding Them Under A Bushel Basket" Award to Cliff Lowery and the Concert Lecture Series for proving that you can bring anybody to campus and somewhere, somehow, somebody around here will help you sponsor them.

The "Lawrence Welk uh-ONE, and uh-TWO . . ." Award to the Media Board, who finally got it all together after three years (off and on) by deciding to ignore all the nasties who could give them trouble and go straight to the Chancellor.

The "??$+???&#c$!!!" Award goes to the SGA Constitution and By-Laws for their logic, coherence, completeness, and consistency of thought and structure, and their clarity and conciseness of expression.

The "Madison Avenue Advertising Council Award" to Elections Board for the FDC runoff that nobody knew anything about.

The "Great Pumpkin's 'What to Do Until Godot Comes'" Award to NCPIRG for their attempts to get money from someone, anyone before the semester is over.

The "Sam Ervin Award for Openness in Politics" to Chuck Melvin and Kevin Moore, for proving that all men are not created equal. (Ed. note: Messrs. Moore and Melvin participated in the streak-in.)

The "Ladies Before Gentlemen, Pearls Before Swine" Award to Cathy Krinick, our new swineherd, who after the last Appealing week may have decided she's sorry she won that old election after all.

The "What I Learned on My Summer Job" Award to Karen Davis, who has been plagued with as many staff changes this year as has her former employer.

To which the editor wishes to add the following:

The "Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed?" or "You Only Thought You Heard A Male Voice; It's 7:00 am" Award to those female dorm residents who defied university and civil authorities by keeping a live night light in their rooms during the energy crisis.

The "First You Have To Catch Her, Men" Award to the campus cops for their swift and courageous action in apprehending the lone female streaker from a crowd of several dozen streaking males.

The "Marie Antionette Aqua-Memorial" Award to those who survived the traditional dunking in the fishpond at the last senate meeting.

The "Huey P. Long Representative Democracy for Fun and Profit" Award to all those senators and others who used certain issues as stepping stones in their political careers.

The "Who Says We Can't Take a Joke?" Award to the majority of the student body, for proving that, some years, it's just better not to be involved.

Changing: In Search of the Hallmark

There was only one real rally this year.

It was an Impeach Nixon rally this spring, and attracted less than a hundred active supporters. Part of the crowd could be attributed to the spill-over from the streak, which was scheduled to take place later that night in the same area. (A lot of people came early to get good seats.) The college campus, that well-known hotbed of revolution and radicalism, was relatively quiet this year.

It was that conspicuous absence that drew attention to the demise of The Movement; and even then, one couldn't be certain what had happened.

Guy was a student at UCLA-Berkeley in 1967-69. He noticed it. What happened to the people, the movement? "I don't know. Times change. People change. I miss it like you miss World War II. It just ran out . . . maybe part of it was trivial. Maybe none of it counted for anything.

"Part of it did. The fight over People's Park — that mattered. Everything else was on a personal level. Senators didn't debate it, but it was important to us. I was not an activist then — I was opposed to the war because my cousin, an illiterate from Arkansas who couldn't even read, got his head blown off in Nam and I said hey, this isn't right. But it was all on a personal level."

Guy was at UNC-G this year, working on his MFA in writing. What did he learn from his involvement?

"Me. I used to say I learned about America, but that was wrong. I learned more about America from going to my grandparent's place, in this incredible small town in Mojave, and just sitting and talking to them. We were hippies, they were rednecks, and they never agreed with anything we said and they never would. But they could sit and listen and say, yeah, I see your point. And that's how I learned about America.

"It's something you have to live through. You have to face the fear and the fighting and learn not to be scared. That was important.

"The riots in Miami seemed like a game. They were dangerous at the time, but that was all . . . we knew that they couldn't make any difference.

"What's the shape to come? None of us know right now. We are back where we started from. The generation now in college completely missed the trouble."

Listening to Guy, you remember what this group has been through. The national media have explored the topic many times before; Marshall McLuhan tried to give guidance but wound up dispensing haze filters which really didn't help. Many explanations could be given about us — the 'gifted generation' that was supposed to be finding all the solutions — we grew disillusioned, got cynical, were disappointed, became realistic, lost idealism, went underground, went crazy. Maybe we're only tired.

Or maybe, just maybe, we've passed the point of predictions. Maybe it will be years before our generation — which missed Ban the Bomb brochures, civil rights marches, and anti-war rallies — can find its own hallmark.

Which may be the biggest change of all.

Alternative Futures

It is 1984, ten years since graduation.

The women of the class of 1974 have gone their separate ways, to become wives, mothers, doctors, lawyers, and many other professions spanning the range of choice which was theirs when they graduated. They were one of the first generations for whom the feminine role held a choice, and for whom neither role assumed a higher or more valid status than another. The choice was the individual's.

And they were one of the first to realize that the choice need not be stated in terms of "either-or", but could be made in terms of "and".
To each her own.

Graduation May 12, 1974

Sunday morning, between intermittent cloudbursts, the Class of 1974 gathers for the first and last time.

The best years of your life, they told you, these are the best years of your life

Graduating nurses are sworn into the Army hours after graduation.

Looking at your friends, you could see only a mass of black robes, the symbol of four years of work. Proud parents were maneuvering pictures of their kids, something for the scrapbook, something tangible to show that four years had accomplished a change. Behind faces that smiled for the camera, you knew what had taken place — the impact of outstanding and inexcusable professors; the love affairs, abortions, marriages; the road trips, the religious experiences; the attempted suicide, the nervous breakdown; the decision to join the gay community; the friends made and forfeited. The change of lifestyle, change of major, change of direction, change of plan. All deeper changes whose marks didn't show in the photograph; sometimes didn't show at all, unless you looked at the person and not the robe.

But now it was push, pull, line up for the old family photo, the snapshot to show aunts and uncles how hard you had studied those years, and the changes, the changes . . .

The challenge of the individual is issued again. To refuse — against whatever odds — to be less than the best within you — to hold your own creativity and your own ego as the main reasons for any achievement — to refuse to fall short of the highest goal you can set — these are difficult credos. Unfortunately, they are usually unpopular. But it is only by holding true to these that anything of lasting value is accomplished on this earth.

But one life, you say — how important can just one life be?
Think — what can one flame do?

Somedays you eat the bears, and somedays the bears eat you.

Considering what this book has been through, it's something of a wonder that it was published at all. As does every half-alert editor, I think I've learned a lot this year in spite of the particular problems this book faced, coming as it did on the heels of a rough year for yearbooks.

I won't bore you with a report of the trials and tribulations; anybody on campus this year remembers the dire predictions given out last fall about this book. And we published anyway, thanks to many good people.

But because I have to be concerned with the welfare of the yearbook, I must issue a warning to the student body. This year witnessed the encroaching of the student senate on the rights of the media. It's a thorny problem, to be sure, and many sincere people are involved on both sides of the issue. But there is a decided lack of understanding of the media on the part of some senators. This lack of knowledge is bringing about the slow but steady destruction of the rights normally given the press.

At the root of the problem is money. The senate controls appropriations and this allows them to extend their domain over other processes, including editorial control. Given enough time — and it doesn't take long — the student senate will exercise virtually complete control over much of the press.

If you want this, okay. But don't dignify it with the title of "free press". It is not. I would hope that the campus would pay careful attention this year. Media Board was created to promote understanding of the media, among other things, and with the cooperation of the senate, could help to find solutions agreeable to both sides.

Freedom is not always lost in noisy battles or in noticeably large portions. It can be eaten away slowly, in small increments; a few dollars here, a word or two there, a concept that only the press itself would miss. And the press, though it still exists, will become just as restrained and government-controlled as if boards had nailed the doors shut. It will be worse, because the illusion of freedom still exists. It can't be changed unless you care.

This year's book tried to respond to student body opinion as reflected in many informal polls conducted by Harriett Kirk, Janice Apple, myself and others. Hence the creation of several new divisions, and the scaling down of others.

In addition, there were certain items included, in part, at the request of the senate as expressed during my confirmation hearings. Foremost among these is the inclusion of Outstanding Seniors (Features, p. 274). The OS were excluded last year, and have long been under attack. (In fact, in each of the three years I served as a senator, various people tried to abolish the election itself on the grounds that it was useless, farcical, childish, unrepresentative.) I have added to the coverage four OS of my own choice, approved by that deadline's staff. It is my feeling that these people are outstanding, as are many others in the class, and were excluded simply because much of the class didn't know where or when nominations were held. They represent the many other people who deserved recognition but, due to inherent factors of the election, were passed over. John Schoffstall is a recognized writer; Carol Brooks edited the Carolinian; Terry Taylor edited the Coraddi and helped organize the Spring Arts Festival; Laurie Conway is a dedicated actress and holds two of the Drama Department's scholarships. These represent the hundreds of others who should have been designated to make this election something more than an exercise in vanity.

That was the extent of rampant editorialization in this year's book. Student government necessitates this lengthy explanation.

Finally (and why should I try to say it when others have done so well?), in the immortal words of Laura Bullock, 1972 Pine Needles editor: "We've really worked hard — sometimes productively — sometimes not People may or may not believe the time we've spent and spent and spent on this book but this is it! Like it or lump it or be on the staff next year."

Many people deserve thanks for their help with this book; I hardly know where to start.

Thank you, staff, for sticking it out. I know it was really rough sometimes. Thank you especially to HAK for managing the business superlatively with a smile; to Janice for helping in Overview and Faculty, as well as Features and Sports; to Paul, Wendy and Nancy for their darkroom work. To the rest, thanks for a job well done.

Thank you, Hunter Publishing, for being the best company in the business; and thank you J.B. Edwards, for color layout and help in cover and endsheet design. A special thanks to Ed Goldston, our long-suffering rep, who always, always came through ahead of time with the materials/info/help/solace.

Thank you, Nick, for the color work and service; and to Barbara Matros, for help with the faculty pics.

Thank you, Wilson Davis, for the use of the News Bureau files to supplement our own faculty coverage.

And thank you, Janelle and John, for letting us reprint your articles.

My personal thanks to the following, whose efforts also helped in the production of this book:

To the Media Board, for their advice and cooperation in a difficult year;

For Dr. Wright, Dr. Calhoon, Mr. Tullar, Mr. Barnes, and Mr. Cassell, awards for patience above and beyond the call of duty;

To my first mentors, Col. C.E. Brown and Tom Kelleher, thank you — I appreciated you more this year than I ever did before;

To those lunatics who masquerade as the Greensboro Studios of WUNC-TV, thank you for three years of listening, friendship, and escape;

To my parents — thanks for more than any parent should be asked to put up with, not to mention layouts on the living room floor and three summer deadlines;

And finally, for the friends who put up with me on a near-if-not-daily basis, thank you: Jenn (Sis); Martha, Anne-Marie, Susan (roomie); Cathy, Nancy, Dosia; Mac, Chuck; John, Janelle, Sylvia (Objectivists and critics); Soz and Flash (my dear Athos and Aramis); and JDar (my turn now to thank you).

And for more than can be named, thank you Robbie and David (wherever you are.) Not without you, guys.
